NADA BOLERO SWEATER SUITS 28.50

CLASSIC BERET, 1.50 JEWELED CLIP PIN, 1.75 Copyright, 1930 by Anne Gary The lives of former generations are a lesson to posterity; that a man may review the remarkable events which have happened to others, and be admonished; and may consider the history of people of preceding ages, and of all that hath befallen them, and be restrained. Extolled be the perfection of Him who hath thus ordained the history of former generations to be a lesson to those which follow.

Before And After

We started out with the intention of saying it in the Arabian manner (we hope you noticed MORTARBOARD 18 Arabian this year) but we were afraid nationalities would become too involved in the strange case of Professor MacIver. If he has hitherto been able to conceal the fact that he hails from the Bonnie Braes of Scotland, we're very much afraid this photograph of him in his early youth will reveal the whole truth. We admit the curls are attractive, but may we voice the suspicion that this old Scotch custom originated not solely because of its great aesthetic appeal, but also because of the very practical economic principle involved.

Perhaps the photographer suggested to the child Mabel the adoption of a pose similar to that of Rodin's Thinker. We're more inclined to think that she assumed it of her own initiative, thus revealing early a seriousness and sedateness which can still be noticed at times. What we've always marvelled at most in Miss Weeks, however, is her exceptional ability for remembering everybody or almost everybody in College. What we solemnly hope at the moment is that there's one person whose identity, in connection with this page at least, will remain unknown.

Looking at this innocent and harmless babe (we mean the one sitting on the grass) who seems somewhat bewildered at it all, who would have foreseen that at a not very much later age he would be the calculating creature that we know today! That's not even very punny, but what we mean is merely, as his students might put it: "If this young man expresses himself in terms too deep for me, why what a singularly deep young man, this deep young man must be."

Before And After

Wasn't it Milton who said "the childhood shows the man as morning shows the day"? We offer in contradiction this photograph of Professor Braun. On the strength of which we maintain that no one knowing the juvenile version would ever have suspected what the future held in store. When little Willie renounced his faith in Santa Claus, no one, least of all himself, knew that someday he would be the walking confirmation of the existence of Santa to every child fortunate enough to see him. No one knew that the solemn looking child would reveal the social potentialities which his popularity at teas and plays and proms and even assembles attests; and no one knew that some day in recognition of his being a vitally essential part of Barnard, Mortarboards would be dedicated to him.

No doubt the parents of this guileless and cherubic looking infant felt secure in the thought that their daughter's expression was an indication of true inward character. How often do actions belie appearances! Miss Goodale has chosen to continue to appear outwardly quite innocent of the base instincts which lurk beneath the surface. But it is only a mask, a clever disguise, designed to deceive the most sagacious. But we have plumbed the depths, and looked behind the frank and kindly exterior, and we have found that Miss Goodale was one of the founders of the institution of MORTARBOARD. Need we say more!

The far-away look in little Edward's eyes leads us to wonder whether he was contemplating regretfully the wonders that were Greece or looking forward with foreboding to the horrors that accompany Greek Games when it becomes his duty to make a hundred modern maidens appear authentically classic. We don't know which prospect was the less joyful to him at the tender age of five, but his present feelings on the subject can be more easily imagined.

GRACE A. HUBBARD

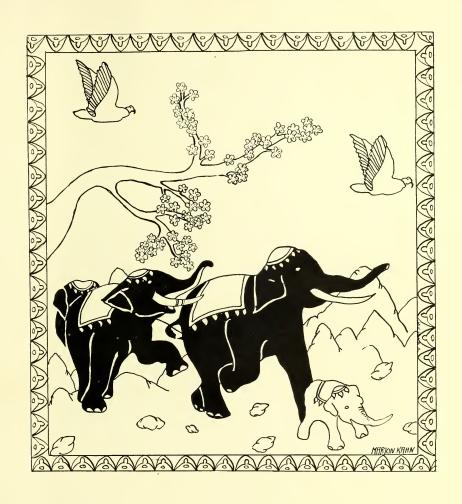

In September the Barnard College faculty lost one of its most valued members, Professor Grace A. Hubbard, who had joined the staff as Adjunct (later Associate) Professor in 1907 after a long and successful career at Smith College. She had been on the retired list for about three years before her death, but although not teaching, she was still an active member of our community, putting at our disposal the wealth of her experience and the keenness and maturity of her judgment. She had never known robust health but her invalidism had never affected the quality of her mind which even in her last years was vigorous, resourceful and eager.

She was an inspired teacher and had an extra-ordinary power of arousing in her students not merely boundless enthusiasm but an ambition to be thorough and scholarly in their work. Although the atmosphere of her class-room was informal and conversational her courses demanded close study, particularly the course in Literary Criticism which attracted always very able and original students. These students of strong individuality especially enjoyed Miss Hubbard's sincerity, her natural unforced way with them, her humour, her gaiety which broke down the barriers of difference of age, and made them feel communicative and at ease. There was piquancy and charm in the union of this informality with the ricerous logic of her brilliant mind.

Many of the alumnae could bear witness to Miss Hubbard's help when it came time for them to go out into the world. Her judgment of character was very shrewd, and she had a genius for penetrating to the centre of a situation. Her directness, her thoroughness, her unfailing sympathy with young people enabled her to meet their minds and help them face their problems. She was always enlisting the interest of her wide circle of friends in behalf of this student or that, opening the way to some opportunity or to some useful contact, and she was never so happy as when she could feel that she had fitted a girl into the place best suited to her talents. Her students continued to come to her long after graduation in every crisis and at her death letters poured in expressing the gratitude of hosts of her young friends who had come to count on her sympathy and counsel.

Student Government at Barnard is carried on through the Undergradute Association of which every student is a member. In some respects the position held by our self-governing body is unique as compared with that of other colleges. No other organization on the campus is of equal importance with it, but to continue in existence must be chartered annually by the Undergraduate Association. The Representative Assembly composed of the leaders of various college activities and members from the college at large is the legislative department of the Association. Student Council consisting of eleven members serves as the executive body while Honor Board acts in a judicial capacity in cases involving dishonesty in academic and extra-curricular affairs. Certain appointed committees have more specialized functions, as those of Eligibility and Curriculum. Thus through these various channels the supervision of the Undergraduate Association reaches every part of student activity.

Every student at Barnard is required to sign the Honor Code, and pledge herself not to give or receive help in examinations or quizzes, or use in them any papers or books in any manner not authorized by the instructors, or to present oral or written work that is not entirely her own, except in such ways as may be approved by the instructor, or to act in any way that is dishonorable in any phase of academic or extra-curricular affairs. It is considered student responsibility to report all violations of the code to Honor Board. The Board acts in a judicial capacity and, when necessary, recommends to the Dean a suitable penalty. The Honor System at Barnard is one of the most successful in operation in the eastern colleges.

CLASS HISTORY

I fain would wax historical
And somewhat allegorical,
And so I ask for patronage, and favorable eyes.
And though I know I cannot claim
A poet's rank or poet's name,
My subject is as grand a one as any author'd prize.

T

We took our twenty mental tests, Our physical, and dental tests, We gave our haemoglobin up for scientific cause; We stood in angel robes and prayed, Until our posture was O. K.'d, And then we entered Barnard, amidst prolonged applause.

We slaved and worried, wailed and wept, At night when our instructors slept, And wrote long-winded theses for the sake of English A; And then we thought it would be best To take the foreign language test: (And still we take it once a year . . . just 'cause we like to play!)

The first event was Mysteries:
The sophs ignored our fervent pleas.
They teased us and they scared us, and they made our life so sad;
How pleased we were when they had done,
Poor little babes of '31,
But then we thought of '32 and lo! our hearts were glad!

Our hearts were light, and we did prance, With charm and grace at Freshman dance; We rolled our baby eyes around at some delightful him. Poor Cupid used up all his stocks, While gazing at our party frocks.

As all of us cavorted, about the Barnard gym.

When springtime came, we spent our days,
In dyeing cheesecloth fifty ways,
And then we bleached the colors out and started in anew.
We won the horse-race and the hoop,
(To strain with disci we'd not stoop)
With ease we could have won the day, but sophs, we pitied you!

Our lunch was next, ah, what a group
Was there to sample John Jay's soup,
We cheered for leader Hunter, and we left her with a sigh.
Miss Latham spoke a kindly word.
And then from Sally V. we heard,
And now we all were sophies, and to childhood said goodbye.

We came to college wearing grins,
Prepared to censure Freshman sins,
To shine in all our classes and to conquer all the earth;
At mysteries the freshmen learned
We were not people to be spurned,
And so they bowed before us as they realized our worth.

When dancing time came round once more, Our social charm came to the fore, We danced and laughed and chattered and we had a lot of fun. And then since we were growing old, (At least that's just what I've been told) We stayed an hour later—in fact till half past one.

Our Greek Games entrance now was blest,
With heart throbs, love, and all the rest;
Our maidens won the judges' hearts, for they were very fair;
Our costumes and our games ranked high,
We left the freshmen high and dry.
And dined at Greek Games supper wearing laurel in our hair.

We took exams, and passed them well
(At least that is the tale we tell)
And blamed our lowered grades upon a hard and cruel fate.
Before we knew the term had passed,
We all were Juniors, and at last,
We tossed our little heads up high and walked with air sedate.

Ш

We did not enter Mysteries,
We had grown older if you please,
We wanted time to flirt and dance, if not to contemplate;
And all our wit we wisely stored,
Within our Persian Mortarboard,
And that we're like Scherherazade admits of no debate!

We set our charm, our grace, our wits,
To work together at the Ritz,
We'd planned our frocks for months ahead, and now the Prom was here!
A favor perched beside each plate,
The orchestra was really great,
It was a grand occasion and its memory is dear.

We did quite well at Junior Show, We danced and kicked and tumbled and we sang a little bit. And all the critics said our play Deserved its chance to reach Broadway; They loaded us with praises and they called the thing a hit. Our lunch comes soon, exams do too, And then with Junior Year we're through!

Although we're not chorines, you know,

And then with Junior Year we're through! We wonder what will happen next and in the future grope; We know the time is drawing near, To undertake our great career; We may all be famous, but we'll have some fun we hope!

EDITORIAL

The great achievements of women's colleges in the past, and their present laudable work in education makes their drive for endowment a worthy project which should recommend itself to every well-filled purse.

The great value of women's colleges is amply demonstrated by the start in life that they have given to many of the famous women of today. It is almost impossible to pick up a newspaper without seeing the names of many of them blazoned forth for some new and far-reaching achievement. It would be an interesting thing to take today's issue of the AUGURY, for example, and see the number of names of graduates of even one college, Barnard would do—, which are to be found in its pages.

The triumphs of the graduates and the faculties of the women's colleges makes them worthy of assistance. Their accomplishments rank very well when compared with those of the men's colleges. Their far inferior endowments act as a severe hindrance to their progress. Their well-wishers will find this ample reason to come to their assistance.

Many Doctors Join In Clinic Survey

The recently printed report of the great Health Clinic of New York is a tale of the triumphs of science and medicine over the disease and poverty of the city.

The Health Clinic is an association of prominent physicians, Doctors Thea Bellanca, Miriam Sachs, Hannah Bailey, Helen Metzger, and Matilda Jostrum.

They have associated with them a notable array of research workers in both the biological and chemical fields. Dorothy Rasch, Florence Susskind, Julia Best, Marguerite Shepard, Belle Tobias, and Rose Warshaw have perhaps done the greatest work in the zoological line.

In chemistry, Florence Mindell, Cecile Ludlam, Anna Serle, Alma Champlin, Eva Michaelis, Martha Schoenemann, and Lois Booth have done a pioneer work.

Beatrice Kassell, who heads the chemistry department, has given up a profitable position in the industrial chemistry field to give herself to this more humanitarian work.

The psychiatric branch of the clinic has been conducted by Dr. Viva Schatia, Lilias Brown, Frances Markey and Barbara Mitchell, who have discovered many new principles of psychiatry, especially in relation to children.

THE SPORTING WORLD

America's latest victory at the Olympic Games which were held this year at Sydney, Australia, is attributed to the great prowess of the women athletes.

The feat of Patty Wilson in winning the 120-yard hurdle was not only a victory of speed but a revelation of beauty. Eleanor Earl, who was runner-up to her team-mate in this race, won her own event the 160-yard dash.

The javelin throw was won by Harriet (Dinky) Formwalt with Dorothy Wendell second.

The swimming team won a string of notable victories. Doris Bigelow won the 100-yard freestyle. Virginia Smith was the victor in the diving competition, her form being universally admired.

In archery two American girls tied for first place. The excellent scores of 47 out of 50 attempts was made by both Milo Upjohn and Gertrude Wylie, the famous physicist.

Teachers Convene; Elect Officers

GRABELSKY ELECTED PRESIDENT COMMITTEES REPORT

More than 550 teachers were present at the annual teachers' convention of New York State held yesterday at Columbia University. New officers were elected for the coming year.

Esther Grabelsky, principal of Evander Childs High School, was elected president. The other officers include: Vice-President, Alice Niederer, head of the Social Science department of the Woodridge High School; Secretary, Edna Meyer, head of the Latin department of Wadleigh High School; Treasurer, Eleanor Tibbetts, of Lafayette High School, Buffalo.

The former president, Winifred Scott, introduced Gertrude Gunther, assistant commissioner of education in charge of language instruction, who gave a short talk on the methods of teaching a foreign language.

The committee on rural education including Florence Sherman, Anastasia Carroll and Alice Porter, reported on the general educational progress in the country districts.

A new committee was appointed to study the present situation in regard to examinations with a view to their abolition. The committee consists of Mary Faillace, Mary Eden, Louise Taylor, Catherine Kennedy, and Barbara Lough

The curriculum committee consisting of Elizabeth Lemkau, Edith Mosbacher, and Evelyn Holmer will give a report at the next meeting.

Alumnae Gives Dance To Seek Endowment

The Alumnae Publicity Committee of Barnard College gave a very successful dance last night at the Hotel Astor to provide an endowment for Barnard.

The chairmen of the affair were Dorothy Leib and Phyllis MacDougall. The committee in charge consisted of Anne Tusten, Elizabeth Raymond, Josephine Sonneborn, Grace Commins, and Helene Blumeneranz.

Brief Reviews

Helene Berman, one of our modern American authors who spends most of her time in France, has just written a new novel of college life. "Odd Study" is a tale of a girl who met most of the crises of her life in the study for which the book is named.

Miss Berman, when interviewed, said there is such a room as she describes, with which she was intimately acquainted in her college days.

Gay illustrations have been made by Martha Snow and Cornelia Merchant, who seem to be able to communicate a very vivid impression of the celebrated Study.

Margaret Routzahn has published a charming book of poems, "A Seller of Dreams." Miss Routzahn is one of the foremost of the modern poets.

Eva Saper, the noted authority on zoology, has published her book, "Paleontological Invertebrates," which clears up scientific doubts on a very difficult subject.

Charlotte Leavitt and Katharine Collins have written a report of their archcological expedition in Arizona, "Chaco Canyon Ruins." These young ladies have made some valuable discoveries for science, and their book is to be highly praised.

Jean Stone and Frances Kyne have just translated the works of Les Freres Goncourt, celebrated French authors of the 19th century.

A new book of lyrics has just appeared

"Candlelight." by Eleanor Cobb.

Staubach Arranges Dance For Charity

The United Charities Organization will hold its annual masque ball for the benefit of the various charities under their control. The president, Edith Gutman, who has been associated with social service for many years, has appointed a committee, the names of which comprise some of the most prominent women in New York in both the social and sociological fields.

Mrs. Richard Roe [nee Irene Staubach] is chairman of the affair, and her familiar reputation for successful social functions is a guarantee of success. Miss Ruth Schoen has been managing publicity for the affair. Other members of the committee are Margaret March, Phoebe Harbison, and Julia Poliakoff.

The United Charities Organization has published its survey of Sociological Statistics of New York. Miss Louise Marshall has edited this great contribution to sociological knowledge. The statisticians whose work has gone into this compilation are Beatrice Zeisler, Harriet Ferris, Erna Jonas, Helen Houghtaling, and June Cunningham. Much of the social research has been done by Meredith Olson.

rectors, and told of many plans for the coming year. It is announced that Gotham has secured a copyright on the famous Orpha Willson textile designs which will hereafter be sold only in this store.

Another prominent member who has been added to the staff of the store is Margaret Calhoun, well-known personnel worker. Miss Calhoun, who in private life is Mrs. John Doe, is well fitted to make her selections for she has had much experience in judging people in bringing up her ten children.

New buyers appointed at this time are Theresa Landes, Laura Leibman, Dorothy Milenthal, Margaret Ellis, Ethel Clinchy, and Norma Lyon.

FAVORITE LINES (or so we suspect)

"Hence: loathed Melancholu." "Give a man a horse he can ride." "My luve is like a red, red rose," "Up! up! my Friend, and guit your books." "And I shall ever bless my destiny." "A sonnet's like a measured minuet." "Serene the silver fishes glide." "It's jest as cheap and easy to rejoice." "I am so glad of the colors of things." "When music sounds gone is the earth I know." "All things that love the sun are out of doors," "Oh God, methinks it were a happy life." "Blow out, you bugles." "The cows come gently here to browse." "What is my mast? A pen." "Let me go wheree'er Î will." "Oh, like a queen's her happy tread." "Said I, 'What can the matter be?" "I am tired of steps and steps." "Give me the glamour of lights." "Order is a lovely thing." "How light and laughing my mind is." "I would be the pink and silver." "The spirit of traffic watchful in her eye." "She had a different way to read the Iliad." "I wish we might go gypsying." "And I shoot and I sing." "It was myself that sang in me." "I have had knowledge to be true." "I would rather work in stubborn rock." "I can only give myself." "I smile, of course."

"The risen will think we slumber on."

WOULDN'T IT BE FUNNY IF:

Louise Marshall ever kept a Major over night? Anne Gary ever thought she passed an exam? Harriet Formwalt forgot how to sneeze? Margaret Erickson had to hurry? Orpha Willson ate in a cafeteria? Ruth Jacobus didn't get an ad she wanted? Dorothy Leib had to ride in the Subway alone? Ruth Abelson didn't have money on her mind? A lion ever saw the Jungle? Patty Wilson wanted a job as the Fat Lady? Freshman Sisters combined beauty and brains? Hannah Bailey looked perturbed? Helen Foote were cross? Helen Metzger lost her enthusiasm? The Dean's Dogs deigned to notice an undergrad? Anna Serle swam the length of the pool? Marjorie Danz stopped smiling?

ASYLUM FOR THE TEMPORARILY INSANE

Ward 1931

I pranced gaily down the corridor of Ward 1931, anxious to see my old pals. The Asylum had just opened, and for some odd reason all my little classmates seemed to be living there.

Loud thumpings attended by an excruciating guffaw, drew me to room No. 1.

"Hello," I cried. There were dear Olga Kallos and Patty Wilson in teeny red socks and bloomers doing handsprings. They kept perfect time to the rhythmic explosive guffaws. Then I noticed whence issued these sounds. In a dark corner squatted Dinkie, sneezing.

The next room was very, very busy. They were painting the walls, the ceiling, the floor with conservative Persian angels.

"Just another plate for Mortarboard," murmured Neal Merchant. The whole Mortarboard Art Staff, still at work!

"I must leave now," importantly from Evelyn Slade. "I have a date to pick up rocks."

"What do you know about True Love, anyway?" asked Martha Snow, with startling seriousness.

"Ahh, I know," came in deep, sophisticated tones from behind me. I turned. There stood Gerda Halgreen, smartly dressed, but carrying too many bundles. "Just drop around and I'll tell you all about love, my little one," she whispered to me apologetically. "I'm just carrying home some grapefruit for hubby's breakfast." I nodded and moved on.

Two maidens, dancing up and down the aisle, intrigued me. They were barefoot and wore long green veils as they gracefully tossed red apples to each other. They didn't mind my watching. "I am the dead Duchess," said one, and she took a flying leap. Marjorie Bahouth! The other replied, "Oh, do come to the next Assembly. It will be so good." Of course, Lou Moeller.

"Irene Staubach, Persecutory Illusions" read the card on the next door. I took a peek. She sat, sadly holding her golden curls.

"They're all after me," she muttered. "Bill and Ted, and my Rutgers' dates. Why did I say I'd go to the Prom with all of them?" And she tore her golden hair.

The next room was quite large, and many important people were there: Ruth Abelson, Ruth Jacobus, Betty Calhoun, Marion Kahn. Ruth Abelson was busily counting money, while Marion sat on the floor painting pictures, and looking up innocently now and then to ask: "Won't someone take me to a musical comedy so-o-n? All I need to find are some steps and some characters and a cute plot and some song hits for Junior Show." "I bet you're fooling," said Ruth J.

An unholy sound made me dash to the end of the hall. They were singing. Yes, a weak little group of Juniors were singing for Evelyn Anderson and Else Zorn, who waved their arms frantically in the air.

"Sing soft, be musical," implored Else.

"Get some pep in you," urged Evelyn. She tried to frown just to seem serious, but no one noticed.

There sat Margaret Erickson and Lou Marshall, and Orpha, and Margaret Routzahn, all giggling and writing notes to each other (about statistics, I'm sure.) And there was Sally Vredenburgh, telling the person next to her what "Wallie" had just said, "Wallie", her little brother. Way over in the corner Ruth Schoen was making eyes at the guard, who leaned quite fascinated against the post. Eva Saper and Dottie Rasch were playing with a mosquito they would dissect in Lab. next hour.

They all looked so sweet, so sweet. If only they would not sing! I pressed my cheek against the door and sighed sentimentally, soulfully.

Someone tapped my shoulder. I whirled round to face a sort of keeper. She had a very jovial face, and wore her uniform rather sportily. I had seen her somewhere before. The sort of person who can make me do things when I have no desire to work.

"Well, old timer!" She hit me profoundly on the back. "I suppose you think you're Bert Falck."

I drew myself up.

"Of course not. I'm Napoleon, but don't tell a soul."

"All right. Glad to meet you, Napoleon," she said. "I'm Dot Harrison. Won't you come along with me?" She winked over her shoulder, so I followed.

We went to a nice white room. The card on the door said: "Grandiose Conceptions," but I didn't understand. Dottie told me to make myself right at home, then as she turned to go, she took a great key from her pocket.

"It's good to have you with us at last," she said, grinning the famous old grin. She clicked the lock and departed.

I sank on the bed. "Napoleon," I sighed, shaking my head, "just another burden for genius, but 50 million Frenchmen can't be wrong."

FRESHMAN FAUX-PAS OR EARLY ERRORS

Three years ago we thought:

That Head Tax was based on our I. Qs.

That Motorability was a course in driving a car.

That Spring Drive was a stroke in golf.

That Hades was peopled by devils.

That Field Day was a branch of the Back-to-Nature movement.

That Mysteries was collegiate slang for exams.

That Soph Hop was a clog dance.

That Health Week meant a low haemoglobin.

That Remedial was a cough syrup.

That Glee Club was a society to prevent gloom.

That Ivy Day was meant for clinging vines.

That Odd Study was a refuge for the mildly insane.

That Greek Games costumes were becoming.

That Columbia men had possibilities.

COMMON DELUSIONS OF THE FACULTY

- 1. That no student ever really deserves an A.
- 2. That there is no difference between B- and C+.
- 3. That there is such a mark as D+.
- 4. That a student is only taking one course of real importance—his own.
- 5. That every course is of some value to somebody all of the time, everybody some of the time, and nobody none of the time.
 - 6. That examinations are fun.
- 7. That it is of great assistance to the students to give a quiz three days before the final examination.
- 8. That placing two copies of a book on reference supplies the needs of fifty students.
- 9. That it is not impossible to be early for a nine o'clock on Monday morning.
- 10. That anything of a humorous nature, which comes up in the course of a lecture must be pointed out and explained or it will pass over the students' heads.

COMMON DELUSIONS OF THE STUDENTS

- 1. That Barnard students are welcome to use the Columbia library.
- 2. That instructors read term papers.
- 3. That the Faculty regard it as a privilege to be invited to attend a student social function.
- 4. That next term she'll do all her work when assigned instead of leaving the entire term's work until just before the final.
- 5. That her interest in acquiring knowledge is so great that she would study if there were no examinations.
 - 6. That there are snap courses.
 - 7. That it is easier to bluff men professors.
 - 8. That she does not work for marks.
 - 9. That in selecting her major, she maps out her career.
 - 10. That all young unmarried male instructors marry Barnard grads.

ENTRANCE, FRESHMAN YEAR

CLASS OF 1931

The prince of Cyprus has left with his retinue to bring home the princess of Cythera, his chosen bride. Already overdue, their return is expected momentarily. Before a great assemblage the king, as high priest of Aphrodite, leads final ceremonies in the temple of the goddess whom they trust to bring the band safely back. Suddenly a runner, spent and breathless, dashes in. He comes from a neighboring country with news of a ship wrecked on the rocky coast, whose remaining spars seem to identify it as that of the youthful band. The king is stunned for a moment by the terrible story, and overcome with bitterness at the blasting of their faith and hope.

The crowd that was silenced at the news of the catastrophe is awed and frightened by the king's somber grief, until, incited into action by his very inaction, the mothers of the lost youths rush upon the altar to hurl imprecations at Aphrodite. The entire populace rages against her, wreaking their vengeance on the temple while its guardians cower against the walls, unable and almost unwilling to prevent the destruction. Gradually the active violence gives way to despairing sorrow, and the people are still, bowed with grief.

Then, slowly becoming aware of approaching strains of triumphal music, they turn in wonder. The prince with his bride enters, bearing a small image of Aphrodite, in offering to the goddess. When he notices the desecration of the temple, he is astounded. The people are numbed with grief at the realization of their sacrilege. Knowing themselves deserving of whatever punishment the goddess may visit upon them, they fall to their knees in abasement and supplication.

In the great hush is heard a melodious bird call, expressing the will of Aphrodite through her chosen messenger: unmistakable sign of the goddess's forgiveness. Aphrodite the magnanimous, the perfect, has pardoned them! Raising ardent thanks, they troop joyfully off to glorify her in games, dance, and the marriage of the two that her watchful care has brought safely back.

CLASS OF 1931

Because of Princess Kleandra's insufferable pride which had led her to neglect the worship due Aphrodite, the goddess had punished her by a horrible disfigurement. Humbled by the realization of her sin, and in dread of the arrival of Prince Dorimachos of Cyprus, her intended husband, she resorts to the temple of the outraged goddess, there to seek forgiveness.

Before the altar of Aphrodite, she dances the story of her sin, offering in sacrifice objects symbolic of her vanity. Her maidens join in her plea for pardon but the goddess is silent.

Completely despairing, the princess offers her life to the priestess in atonement. At this moment, the prince entering in search of his bride is repulsed by the maiden. As the priestess raises the sacrificial dagger above the princess, the voice of Aphrodite rings out imperiously: The princess through her sincere humility has gained beauty of spirit, thus appeasing the goddess, who returns to her her outward radiance.

The princess rises in awe, lifts her veil, and to the joy of her maidens stands revealed in her former loveliness. Prince Dorimachos advances to claim his bride, while his attendants join the maidens in a spontaneous dance of joy, during which he leads out the Princess.

Chloe, beloved of Kallikles, has been chosen to represent Persephone in the annual festival of spring dedicated to the Goddess of Fruits and Grain. In the midst of the pantomine in which Persephone's capture by Pluton is depicted, Chloe, suddenly frightened, breaks away from the high priest and rushes from the temple. She and her lover attempt to flee, but this sacrilege to Persephone, all-powerful Goddess of Corn, and Queen of the Dead, is not to be endured by the terrified and enraged populace. The two lovers are captured and Chloe, led to the foot of the altar, is killed, while Kallikles is forced to look on in helplessness. The populace withdraws in horror from the temple, and at last, left alone, Kallikles silently bears away the body of his beloved.

THE STORY OF THE LADY OF BARNAKEN OR

THE STORY OF THE LADY WHO HAD BEEN A MAIDEN AND BECAME A JUDGE

INTRODUCTION

It is related that there was in ancient times, in the States that lie West of the Sea, a country possessed of beautiful traditions, and called by the name of Barnákan. Now among the beautiful customs of Barnakan, the most delightful of all was a festival held each year by the maidens in the form of a contest in drama and dancing and games. This festival was an occasion of great rejoicing and every damsel upon arriving at an age of loveliness took part therein for two years. After that happy period had passed, a damsel might then witness the festival for two more years, but all four being counted, she might not nourish hope of again gaining admittance unless she were deemed full of wisdom and chosen a judge or had access to the Gate-Keeper's Ear.

Now it befell that there was a Lady in the land who was possessed of a great store of goods, chattels, sesames of gold, and jewels and a daughter. The Lady lacked access to the Ear, but had been conceded to be wise, and, a few years after her maidenhood expired, had been elected a judge. And the time at last came when the Lady's daughter had read a thousand books of histories and works of the poets and so became radiantly lovely. Then the Lady said unto her daughter, O my daughter, this year thou shalt take part in the festival. The maiden clasped her hands to her bosom and jumped about in great excitement. And when she was become weary with jumping, a wonder came upon her, and she advanced unto the Lady and sat close upon a cushion and spoke to the Lady saying, Relate unto me, O my mother, what is a festival and what are the joys of taking part therein? Thereupon the Lady sighed a sigh of great wisdom, and gently took the maiden's hand and said, Verily will I, O my daughter, for it is well that thou should know what is to befall thee.

CHAPTER ONE

On a sunlit afternoon, in the labyrinths outside the arena, thou wilt foregather with the other maidens, and thou wilt find them maidens of all varieties; little ones like new moons, large ones like full moons, tall ones, short ones, and others. And the small ones will cling to the skirts of the full moons, and frolic about with balls to impart that they are babes; the tall ones will be beneath helmets, impartng that they are youths; others will furrow their brows, wear fleece over their locks, and with disturbed gait, be old men. The rest like thyself will be demure and gay, the maidens of the throng, adorned all over with blossoms.

Then there will come a great hush. Thou and the old men and the babes and the matrons will endeavor to peer through the portal, each to seek in the arena stands, her mother's face beneath her mother's crown set with pearls. But the arena stands will be a shimmering vastness of crowns set with pearls. Thereupon, thou wilt draw, and conjure thy knees to be still and admonish thy neighbor that the portal-crack was forbidden. Of a sudden there will be a crash of cymbals immediately behind thee, and the portals will be flung open for thine entry; and thou wilt find that thou art quite filled with a giddiness.

Lo, suddenly, thou wilt be running in with the youths and the old men, the maidens and the babes. And thou sayest to thyself in great distress, the water lilies of Damascus are inclining toward slipping from my hair! And thou wilt cast an eye in the direction of the judges and say indifferently to thyself, They are thinking, That maiden runneth with great feeling. She is lovely to look upon! Nelzharad, thy friend, will then jostle thee as she runs past thee on through the throng, and thou wilt say to thyself, Nelsharat looketh not like a youth. She is too plump beneath the helmet. Then suddenly thou shalt see the crowd commencing to kneel, and exclaim, O Allah! Where is the spot where I belong? And then thou wilt kneel down quickly and think. Now I must count unto nine and then cry out in supplication toward the altar. And thou wilt count unto ten, and hearing the others, be cheered, and utter forth a little noise.

And behold, four virgins and a goddess shall issue forth out the temple in answer to the supplication of the maidens and the youths, the old men and the babes. Then the goddess shall step forward and summon the maidens to come unto her. And thou and twenty maidens will arise and ascend the altar steps, and kiss the ground before her and lay at her feet a cucumber of the Nile. Then, O my daughter, thou who are especially favored, will bring thy pomegranate seed and lay that upon the cucumber. And the goddess will be pleased.

And when ye shall have withdrawn, the wicked King, oppressor of the throng, shall in his turn, advance unto the altar. There he will pick a place upon the steps and lay himself down upon it, as the goddess, in answer to the supplication of the maidens and the youths, the old men and the babes, smites him dead with a rubber-tree leaf.

When his chariot shall have taken him away, and the people have risen up to give thanks to the goddess, behold two virgins shall then surround the altar and tip towards it their lighted golden torches. And in their hands the torches will quaver gently, and thou wilt say to thyself, O Allah, let the altar light! and when the flame is burst forth thou wilt notice that some of the maidens have draperies. And thou wilt say to thyself, O Allah, put it out! From behind there will come a considerable commotion, at which thou wilt turn, looking past some maidens and some youths, and see that, lo, it is the Viceroy of the Fire-blanket. Then all will be well for thou wilt know that the Viceroy hast also a water-bucket. Perhaps thy friend may then turn to thee, saying, Hast the fire-flames frightened thee, O my friend? In which event thou wilt answer, Dost thou think me a coward, O Nelzharad?

When the priestess, in white robes and a great tone shall have spoken forth the invocation, then thou and all the others, even to the old men and the babes, shall raise up thy voices rejoicing, and press swarming towards the portals, there to watch the other games and await the decree of the judges. And all will make a great clamor for all will know in advance that they have won.

And when the laurels are awarded to thy rival maidens, thou wilt think in a small voice, But I so prettily laid my pomegranate seed on the cucumber, O Allah! And thou wilt drop thy Jasmine sprig so that thou mayest brush the tear away on they surplice. Then before thy head is raised thou wilt be jostled by some old men out-running the babes in pursuit of the victors riding in the chariots. The crowds will race shouting around the arena. And thou wilt start running a little thyself, when, lo, thou wilt know of a sudden that thou wilt win next year. Nelzharad will run past thee on toward the chariot but thou wilt reach it before her. And thou bringest home thy pomegranate seed to keep in happy memory.

This, O my daughter, that I have related, is how it was with me when I was a maiden.

CHAPTER TWO

Now it is said that the daughter of the Lady of Barnákan was ill-content to hear an end to the tale. And the Lady smiled upon her daughter and said, O my gift of Allah, give heed then to a different story.

It was many years ago when the morning of the great day dawned and I arose and put on a dress embroidered with gold and a crown set with pearls and proceeded until I had arrived at the Grand Blue Saloon in the palace of the Queen of Barnákan. There the Wezeers, Viceroys, Chamberlains and wise-women of the country, who were to have the judges' seats that year, were welcomed by maidens bringing before us offerings of flower garlands which we hung about our necks. Thereupon, when we had done this, we went forth in a procession until we came to one of the seven gate-ways of the arena which I had never before seen. Now I was towards the middle of the line and therefore could not see before me; but when it came my turn to step through the portal, lo, all the people were risen to their feet applauding, and the arena became a shimmering vastness before my eyes, and I became a measure giddy; and I did not impart this to my neighbor.

When we were seated a hush fell upon the place, and I remembered and wondered if the maidens and youths, the old men and the babes, were able to perceive their proper mothers through the crack. The portal burst forth and across the quiet laureled place came running a hundred lovely maidens; slender ones with helmets hiding their golden locks, all but one strand, and some with a little white down on their hair, and some laden with flowers, an hundred lovely maidens.

Sitt el-Hosn, my daughter!, cried a voice behind me. She that runneth so lightly, my little Sitt el-Hosn!

The patterns of maidens before the altar steps shifted, color on color deepening, action sharpening to a climax. A maiden ascended to the altar and placed an offering, and all at once I remembered a sweet pomegranate seed; and the kneeling ones before me raised their voices in thanksgiving, and I remembered counting nine counts that held to ten. And then I said to myself, O Allah, I feel within me a great yearning to be among them! And my heart grew infinite sad for I saw my maidenhood departed.

When after the first group of maidens had gone forth from the temples rejoicing, and the second group had come wearing different colors and carrying different offerings, and sought and been granted their desire, a messenger came unto us saying, O esteemed Judges, wilt thou entrust to me the decisions of thy wisdom, that I may give them to the Chamberlain of Points? Thereupon I wrote down the symbol of the name of the first one hundred maidens without affixing my seal, as is the custom among the festival judges of Barnákan. After the messenger had proceeded to the Chamberlain, the Lady Fubeydeh, a wise woman from another land who had not before been witness to the festival of Barnákan, turned to me and said laughing. By Allah, O my fellow judge, was the circle or the crescent ordained the symbol for the second group of maidens? And I answered her and said. O Lady of another land, I wonder at thy question but I will give answer, the circle. Fubeydeh laughed and answered, Wonder not. In the turban of the messenger there was a jewel of exceeding beauty from which I was unable to take my eyes away. And when it came my turn to deliver to the man my vote I discovered I had forgot which one should stand for which. And thus I voted as I did not intend. But it is of little matter is it not? The maiden guardian of the pomegranate seed which once I had been arose in me and I stared, powerless to speak at the woman, and finally so incensed was I that I could not restrain myself from rebuke, I said, Woe unto thee, for, by Allah, thou shouldst know that such a reversal might cause the breaking of a maiden's heart. And I commanded her to make another sign, the correct one for her decision, and I arose and myself took the message to the Chamberlain. From my return I did not again address the Lady Fubeydeh, for I liked her not.

There came then into the laurel-bound oval of the arena a number of dancing girls, one-half performing first; the other after. And one dance told in its design of movements an ancient story that so entangled the fancy that one was loathe to see it end. And the other dance told an ancient story in a design of movements that so delighted the eye that one was wont to weep that an end must come. When the messenger was come there was no peace in the minds of the judges, for they could not be content that either one should be denied the wreath. And we knew the former dancer was right. But we each divided our votes between them.

The games ensued, joyous, graceful, exciting. And when they were done and the oval track cleared wide there came again a hush upon the arena. For the larger part of those gathered there were initials of old and we knew what was coming. The portals were flung wide. And a gold and a silver chariot blazed in their opposite archways. Together the charioteers cried, Nike! and the whips cracked high over their heads. An instant, short as the intake of a breath, then they flamed into the runway and around, like unto a mad wind. I was wont to arise and shout louder than the loud applause, I was wont to weep a little in my throat, and I said, Beautiful! And a voice beside me said, They are beautiful! I looked to see from who the words came. And I met the eyes of the Lady Fubeydeh, and we smiled and were friends, and together turned back to watch the quieted teams parade and come finally to a halt at the ends of the oval.

Shortly thereafter the winners were announced. And I found I cared not whether the wreaths were awarded as I had voted or not. And neither did the Lady Fubeydeh. The racing chariot teams flashed past bearing the victors, and the crowd, cheering, surged after, a torrent of mad gay color. And I went forth into the late afternoon and found it beautiful.

This, O my daughter 'Eemahrad, is the story of how it was with me when I was among the judges, and of how it will be with you.

LYRICS, SOPHOMORE YEAR

Persephone

Have you ever thought of her after she went down
To the weird green-grayness and the tense, thick quiet,
Sitting slim and still on an evil-glinting throne,
With her litle white face and her sombre crown?
Have you ever thought of her, wordless and alone,
In the heavy, dragging, quietude of doom,
With her wan hands folded and her white feet still,
Like the stiff, cold image on a girl-child's tomb?
And never, never peace on her small peaked face,
The Long, grave peace that is after hope's death;
All her white loveliness a poignant waiting
For the tremor of the earth at its first-drawn breath,

Helene Berman, 1931.

THE WANDERING DEMETER

She came to me at twilight with my child, Leading her by the hand along the way; A stranger woman, kindly faced and mild, Bearing a torch, and in a robe of gray.

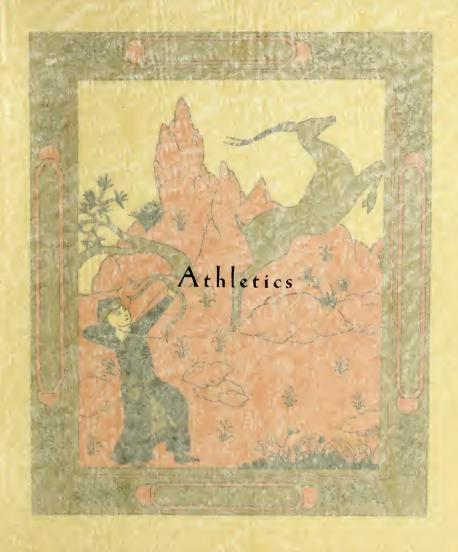

She said, "I found thy daughter in the field, Gathering purple crocuses and gold. Day's brilliant sunlight doth to shadow yield; Now safe within thine arms thy child enfold.

"A child of mine roamed joyous, like thine own, 'Mid blooming fields beside the white-bleached sea. Some nameless power seized her there alone, And only empty grief is left for me."

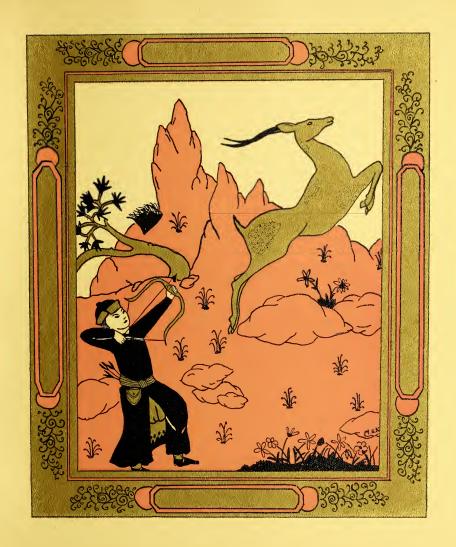

The woman laid my daughter's hand in mine, Half loath to let her go, and then she bent And gently kissed her, and I saw the shine Of tears, but cannot tell which way she went.

ALICE AT BARNARD

(With apologies to Mortarboard's Arabian theme)

Alice awoke as a sudden blast of wind ran up her spine. "Oh dear, oh dear," was all she said. For she really wasn't surprised at all. She had got in the way of expecting nothing but out-of-the-way things to happen. She turned to the White Rabbit. "Still they might have closed it up the side."

The White Rabbit took out his watch. "Hurry up. Hurry up. You'll be late. They're expecting you."

Alice blushed. "With only this robe?" For she knew very well that one didn't visit strange people without clothes.

"Oh", said the Rabbit, "that's all right. Nobody wears clothes here. Clothes are sent to the cafeteria."

"What do they do with them there?"

"Can them, silly. Where do you think fresh vegetables come from? Don't ask so many questions. Come on directly."

Here Alice began to cry for she felt very lonely and embarrassed, but clutching her rags she followed the Rabbit into a little hall with doors on every side.

"Have you signed it? . . . signed it? . . . signed it? You must sign it. Come on now quickly. What's your astrabismoporphalialosis? Come on, come on. Don't be so stupid."

Alice turned. There was no one there. But on the floor she saw a paper which had on it in beautiful printing "Fill me out." It did seem rather peaked, but before she could hit upon a plan for increasing its girth the White Rabbit picked it up and started reading it.

"What did your grandmother die of?"

"But," said Alice in a small voice, "she isn't dead."

"That doesn't matter," he replied impatiently. "Is there any mojoaceticacidistosis or hydrophorous in your family?"

"Well," Alice said doubtfully. "I have a cousin Guisepina."

As the White Rabbit began to write this down a large hand snatched the paper and shoved Alice through a door.

"Sit down. Stand up. 3 inches . . . 5 inches . . . ten feet."

"Alice began to say, 'I only have two feet' when two fierce creatures seized her, and she found herself speaking into a large balloon.

"Stop talking. Breath in. Breath out. 57 . . . 46 . . . 95 . . . 82. That's all. Doctor's office to the left."

Alice was glad to escape as she never had liked arithmetic anyway. She bumped into a small white room. "Liver and lettuce, my dear, liver and lettuce". Alice looked round. There was not a soul in sight. But a large grin sat at a large desk. Alice sneezed and her rags blew apart. "Liver and lettuce," said the grin.

"I think it's the draft," Alice sneezed again.

"Lettuce and liver, my dear."

Alice waited patiently for it to say something else. It only went on murmuring, "Liver and lettuce . . . lettuce and liver . . . liver and lettuce." She heard the White Rabbit calling, "Alice where are you?" She ran to the door. As the White Rabbit pulled her into the next room she still heard "Live and lettuce... live and lettuce.'

There she spied a new figure. "What's that?" she asked.

"That's a Jabberwock," the White Rabbit answered. Alice went closer to examine it for she had never seen one before.

"Don't lose it. You won't get another."

"Lose what?" she asked.

"Your key, of course."

"Oh, dear, how strange everything is today! I haven't even got a key."

"Well, here's one, then. Sign here and here and here."

Suddenly they heard a "clump-clump" and the door swung wide open. The Jabberwock bowed low. Your Highness, will you see Alice?" The figure at the door shuffled a handful of signs and finally held out one-a large one.

COME IN

"Curiouser and curiouser," Alice thought as she stepped over the sill. The Duchess bent down and tied up Alice's feet with huge cables.

"OH, my poor little feet," Alice cried. "What are you doing to them?" A large sign flashed before her eyes.

RAISE YOUR FALLEN ARCHES TURN OUT YOUR FEET WHEN YOU WALK AND REMEMBER WHO YOU ARE.

"But now they won't walk the way I want them to," Alice complained. "Do you think the poor things could carry me any more?" Just at this moment the clock struck twelve. As Alice was pushed violently from the room she caught a glimpse of another sign.

OFFICE CLOSED FROM 9 TO 11.55 AND 12 TO 5

This so unnerved her that she burst into a torrent of tears. The White Rabbit, who had been waiting for her, stamped his foot. "It's about time!" he cried. "My fur and whiskers. Tt-tt! Stop that crying this minute. A great girl like you!" Impatiently he seized her shoulders and shook her.

Alice woke with a start. "You ought to be ashamed," her governess was saying, "crying in your sleep. . . . "

Wigs and Cues is no longer a closed organization. The revised policy of the club admits any Barnard student to membership. All that is required is an active interest in the theatre and kindred arts. With a very much increased membership, Wigs and Cues has been able to extend the scope of its program. A professionally directed Fall Production proved that Barnard still has a place for a dramatic organization. Plans for the coming semester include monthly meetings at which members of the club will present papers, plays, and informal entertainments, as well as teas at which men and women active in the theatre will be guests. There are tentative plans for a Spring Production.

The Fall Production was Sutton Vane's gripping tragedy, "Outward Bound." An innovation in the form of a double cast gave more members of the club an opportunity to participate. The play was well-received by the college and public, and was ample justification for the enthusiasm and effort which went into the production.

In 1923, a group of girls interested in the various phases of German life, met to talk informally. This was the nucleus of the Deutscher Kreis, which was formally instituted in 1924. Since its organization the club has benefited by a fund given by Mr. Edward D. Adams to the German Department, providing for the Adams Prize and the encouragement of the study of German in Barnard. Assisted and supported by the German Department, the Kreis has sought to bring the students into contact with the artistic, musical and everyday Germany. Prominent people have appeared at the meetings. The special pride and celebration of the Deutscher Kreis is the Christmas party accompanied by a tree and carols.

MENORAH

In the past year the Barnard Menorah has devoted itself to a consideration of the various aspects of modern Jewish life. At the monthly teas, men prominent in their fields have spoken on Jewish music, liturgical and secular, the Jewish drama, Zionism, present conditions of European Jewry, the modern German-Jewish philosopher, Martin Buber, and the new conception of Judaism as a civilization.

Menorah is a means whereby the busy student may gain an acquaintance, essential to a modern cultural equipment, with the present stirring of Jewish thought and creative impulse.

Menorah is a non-sectarian organization. All members of the college who are interested are cordially invited to join and to attend the meetings.

Secretary	FILIPPA VULTAGGIO
Social Chairman

Il Quindicinale is a club for all those interested in Italian life and thought. With its numerous social receptions and lectures, the club tries to satisfy this interest and to keep up the spirit of Italy. A new feature has been introduced this year to achieve this purpose. Song meetings are held at frequent intervals where popular songs, folk and patriotic songs and operatic selections are sung.

The program this year is especially attractive and varied for it includes teas and receptions given to famous Italians such as Professor Giuseppe Prezzolini; a play to be given at the Casa Italiana by students of Italian, and Christmas festivities to be celebrated in a real Italian fashion with a play, Italian Christmas songs and a representation of the "Child in the Manger," called "Presepio". The club is also planning to attend Italian plays, operas and dinners.

Of the eight teas given throughout the year, two are devoted to French plays, one to the singing of French popular songs from the twelfth century to the present day, and one to the presentation of a sixteenth century ballet and songs of that century. Other teas are given in honor of eminent French visitors.

The activities of the Spanish Club in Barnard College are a real factor in acquainting its members and the College at large with the culture and interesting customs of ancient and modern Spain. The club is fortunate in having Room 145, Hewitt Hall, as its headquarters. The Spanish furniture and delightful setting makes this room a pleasant meeting place for small social gatherings and gives a possibility of retirement to members who want to read, or converse in Spanish with other members of the Circulo.

During the year, the Circulo was privileged to welcome distinguished guests from far-away Spain. Among them H. E. Don Jose de Yanguas Messia, President of the Spanish National Assembly, Professor Josquian Fernandez Prida, the great historian Professor Rafael Altamira, Professor Jose Trias de Bes, the famous dancer La Argentina, and many others.

The Circulo Hispano endeavors to give its members every opportunity to use the language and to acquire a better understanding of both the tradition and the progress of Spain.

Classical Club was founded twenty-four years ago by students interested in the classics. Its purpose is to discuss informally, from time to time, matters pertaining to the life, literature and art of ancient Greece and Rome. The club has been very successful in securing distinguished persons to come and address its members, and not the least among its activities have been its dramatic presentations of classical authors. In its membership the club includes not only undergraduates but interested members of faculty and alumnae as well.

The purpose of the annual Student Fellowship Drive is to raise two thousand dollars for two fellowships of one thousand dollars each. One Fellowship is awarded to a Barnard student, a member of the present Senior Class for study abroad during the year following her graduation from College. The other Fellowship is awarded to a foreign student for study at Barnard for the period of one year. The holders of the Fellowships for this year are Madeline Russell studying at the London School of Economics and Julie Averekieva of Russia.

N. S. F. A.

They set their Christmas trees on green front lawns. They pick their fruit for breakfast from the family tree. They revel in breezes as soft as spring and see above them sheltering hills. For THEY are Stanford students. On January 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th the National Student Federation of America held its fifth annual Congress. Leland Stanford distinguished itself as a gracious host to more than one hundred and fifty delegates from all over the United States. The days were crowded with business meetings, formal and informal discussion groups, nation-famous speakers. The Federation seeks to be a clearing house for college problems, a give-and-take proposition. The student leaders are eager, enthusiastic. They see the inner meaning of the organization that alone brings together in open forum those who have problems and those who have answers.

California is irresistibly gay and Stanford men are good company. The delegates, earnest by day, threw off their gravity at night and had a unique brand of college fun. Four days is just the wink of an eye as it becomes a thing of the past. But the influence of the Congress and the work of the N. S. F. A. are being diffused by those who know the best what it's all about—the lucky 1930 delegates. Dorothy Harrison, 1931, was the Barnard delegate.

W. I. N. A.

Thirteen of the leading Women's Colleges in the East sent sixty delegates to the Conference of the Women's Intercollegiate News Association, held on November 2nd and 3rd, at Wellesley, that members of the editorial and business staffs of the college newspapers represented might exchange their ideas and discuss their various problems.

The Conference was divided into two groups. Members of the editorial staffs met to talk over the various aspects of their work and to discuss such questions as the prominence to be given to national news and other topics of more than local interest; the space to be given to the critical evaluation of books, the theater, and the arts; faculty control or supervision; humorous interest stories, personal interviews and feature columns. Members of the business staff sought to discover the best ways of making college newspapers financially successful. The Conference was addressed by several distinguished Journalists, among them Mr. Lyman Abbott, Editor of the Christian Science Monitor.

The delegates from the Barnard Bulletin were: Mary Dublin, Editor-inchief; Viola Robinson and Elizabeth Benson, Managing Editors, and Dorothy Rasch, Advertising Manager.

JUNIOR MONTH

Each year, twelve college Juniors from the leading women's colleges in the East, have the unusual opportunity of speading the month of July together in New York to investigate community problems. Housing, Child Placing, Social Work in Industry, Medical Social Service, the Mental Defective, the Homeless, the Juvenile Delinquent, and Work with the Handicapped are among those studied by the group primarily from the point of view of the social worker. Visits to various institutions and points of interest vividly illustrate a series of lectures and seminars on these topics. The experience is consummated in actual case work done by each of the Juniors.

Miss Clare M. Tousley, who instructs at Barnard and is an Assistant Director of the Charity Organization Society of New York City, has arranged the intensive program and supervised the enterprise for a number of years. The Juniors, whose expenses are paid through the C. O. S., represent Vassar, Smith, Wellesly, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe, Wells, Goucher, Connecticut, Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore, Elmira and Barnard.

Thelma Rosengardt was the Barnard delegate in 1929.

What ho, a menagerie? And yet a ballroom, gay with bright balloons, flowers, and shaded candle light. The Class of '29 held its last rendez-vous amid youth and beauty, song and dance, wit and humor. Dexterous waiters glided swiftly about their business. Alluring hostesses breathed fragrance to the air. The police squad who raided the place found sobriety the order of the evening. It was the last appearance of an illustrious class. They! . the Gates of the Barnard Night Club thereafter to feather other nests

Never Out of Style

PUBLIC fancy may shift from bonds to stock and back again; there is always a large body of investors quietly placing their money in high grade real estate First Mortgages.

They are persons, some with huge funds and others with limited savings, who agree that they first want safety and after that as good an income as can be had without danger of loss.

This Company has long been a favorite resort of this type of investors because we deal in only the highest grade of guaranteed First Mortgages on New York City property and our guaranty fund of over $27,000,000 leaves nothing to be said.

Also Certificates—$200 upward Interest begins immediately You are cordially invited to consult
